

For Immediate Release

June 5, 2020

For more information:
Cole Yungmann (443)545-6901

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE ON JUNE 5, 2020

Shreveport Mayor Adrian Perkins and SC Health SPV Announce Free Protective Masks For High Risk Shreveport Citizens

COLUMBIA, SOUTH CAROLINA June 2, 2020 - South Carolina based SC Health SPV is proud to be partnering with Mayor Adrian Perkins (Shreveport, LA) to donate over 10,000 protective masks (PPE) to local residents as Shreveport enters Phase 2 and more businesses begin to reopen. These masks will be distributed to vulnerable populations through four independent agencies.

Josh Booty, Shreveport native and former Evangel, LSU, NFL, and MLB star, is a member of the SC Health SPV team and was pleased to arrange this event with Mayor Perkins' office. Booty said, "It is great to help out my hometown and see all my friends and neighbors. I am so pleased to be able to help with this wonderful event."

"Masks are more important than ever, as we enter Phase 2 of reopening and more people are moving around. This is especially true for our vulnerable populations," said Mayor Adrian Perkins. Roughly 40% of Shreveport residents are high-risk of severe illness due to COVID-19, and these masks will help create a layer of protection for them in our community. I am grateful to SC Health SPV for their generous donation."

SC Health SPV is 100% USA owned/operated, with headquarters in Columbia, SC. Alex Szkaradek, President of SC Health SPV said, "God has blessed me, so I can bless others. During these unprecedented and challenging times, neighbors should help neighbors, even if we are from different states. We are very grateful that Mayor Perkins arranged this mask giveaway to help local citizens."

SC Health SPV will be making more mask donations in communities nationwide in conjunction with state and local businesses and agencies through its "Free Masks for Local Merchants" campaign. For more information, visit our website www.schealth.com.

###